

STUDENT LABOR AGREEMENT FOR _____
(Student's Name – Please print)

The Seventh-day Adventist educational system has traditionally believed that the whole student should be educated. This included the idea of work. Students have worked to help defray their expenses to enable them to receive a Christian education. We will endeavor to continue that tradition, but we reserve the right not to offer employment to all students. In the past the earnings from student labor have been placed on the students' accounts, and parents have paid the difference after scholarships and financial aid have been awarded.

This year we are offering you and your student options as to how you want student labor handled.

- One option is to continue applying the student labor as a direct deposit to the student's account at Ozark Adventist Academy. With this option student labor can be considered as part of the financial plan and financial aid may be available.
- Another option is to direct deposit to a bank account of your choosing. There would be no student labor figured in your financial plan. Student labor may or may not be made available, but the parent would be responsible for the full payment of the account.

We need to have you give us direction as to how you want the student labor handled for your student.
